

The Archbishop's reconciliation ministry

Blessed are the peacemakers

scroll down

In a world plagued by conflict and division, the Church has a crucial role to play as a community of peacemakers. Jesus calls every one of us to love God, our neighbours, ourselves – and our enemies. It's a challenging command, with nobody left out. We're all given the message and task of reconciliation. The Archbishop's Reconciliation Ministry encompasses 3 main streams of work:

difference.

The Difference Course

divided world, seeing transformation through everyday encounters.

Women On The Frontline

Women on the Frontline recognises the essential ministry of Bishops' and clergy spouses across the Anglican Communion. The ministry encourages personal relationship, reconciliation to God through Christ and facilitates training to equip these women to carry out their role in their own contexts.

Find out more

Peacebuilding

Peacebuilding is creating an architecture through which peace can develop: processes, structures, relationships and values that lead towards - even incentivise - conflict.

Why we need reconciliation

A message from Archbishop Justin on why reconciliation is the greatest need in our world today.

Read more

Father forgive

The Cross of Nails is a symbol of hope and friendship in the aftermath of conflict.

Learn more

Watch the Archbishop's previous adviser for reconciliation, Canon Sarah Snyder, talking about why every Christian is called to work for reconciliation:

Reconciliation

"Christ calls us to be peacemakers who cross the borders and barriers that divide us – radical in our generosity and welcome."

Archbishop Justin Welby

Sign up

Join the movement

Source URL: <https://www.archbishopofcanterbury.org/priorities/reconciliation>