

Archbishop Justin Welby met 50 young Anglicans from across southern Africa on Thursday to discuss the environment and discipleship at a youth conference in Lusaka ahead of the Anglican Consultative Council meeting.

Archbishop Justin was joined at the conference by the Archbishop of Central Africa, Albert Chama. Together, they listened to presentations from the young Christians on issues including renewable energy, mining, deforestation, land erosion, farming practices, waste, water, and air pollution. Some of these took the form of oral presentations while others used drama and song to get their message across.

Read more at the Anglican Communion News Service

---

Source URL: <https://www.archbishopofcanterbury.org/speaking-and-writing/articles/acc-16-archbishop-talks-environment-and-discipleship-young-anglicans>