

a Daily Mail headline suggesting he had apologised for the RAF

"No honest reading of what I said in the church and on the BBC afterwards could come anywhere near such an idea," he writes.

"Contrary to the the Mail's report, on the BBC I spoke clearly of the bombing of British cities, mentioning especially Coventry and London. I also spoke of the terrible losses of the heroic crews of Bomber Command. My grandmother's brother was killed on his first mission, in a Wellington."

Read the full blog.

1 min read

Source URL: <https://www.archbishopofcanterbury.org/news/archbishop-justins-reflections-dresden>