

Catholic sister Ula Michlowicz does not receive Communion at the daily Anglican Eucharist at Lambeth Palace.

A recent article in the Times newspaper ('French Catholics start a revolution at Lambeth Palace', 26 July) suggested that Ula Michlowicz, a Polish Catholic sister who is part of the Chemin Neuf community at Lambeth Palace, receives Communion at the daily Anglican Eucharist at the Palace.

The Times has since clarified, on our request, that Sister Ula attends the daily Eucharist but does not receive Communion - only a blessing. She goes separately to Mass at Southwark Roman Catholic Cathedral and receives Communion there.
